

The Knox-Gingrich Endowed Dairy Production Medicine Scholarship

This scholarship was founded by Dr. John Knox, from Shelby, Ohio and owner of Kirkview Veterinary Services and Dr. K. Fred Gingrich II, from Ashland, Ohio and the current Executive Director of the American Association of Bovine Practitioners. The scholarship was founded to help support the education of a senior student of The Ohio State University College of Veterinary Medicine interested in and demonstrating proficiency in dairy production medicine. The award is an endowed award and therefore will be available each year. Typically, the scholarship is a $1000 award depending on the performance of the endowed fund. Applications can be made through the college.
